You

- like solving puzzles (because this is essentially what we do :))
- possess a natural curiosity and a drive to learn something new every day
- are either a former startup CTO, or VP Engineering at fast-scaling startups or otherwise a consultant of several years who has performed Tech Due Diligence
- have an excellent understanding of technology, on both conceptual and practical level
- know how to translate business models into strategic implications on technology
- understand how Engineering organisations need to be built in order to scale
- are a person of highest integrity, discreet, thorough and absolutely trustworthy
- understand that a serious work ethics and having fun are no contradiction
- are emotionally and intellectually smart but humble
- are fluent in English, both spoken and written

Together

- we conduct Tech Due Diligence and health checks and consult VCs and startups on whether to buy or invest into technology companies
- we assess new technology, architectures and teams against industry best practices
- we help startups to get ready for scale and success
- we are trusted advisors and sparring partners for founders, CTOs and investors
- we work on our standards and tooling to ensure we deliver holistic, data-driven kick-ass results within just a couple of weeks or even days

We are based in Berlin, Germany but are a remote-first company (office or home office). Due to Covid-19, we conduct almost all of our DDs per remote communication, but post-covid you should be willing to travel every couple of weeks. Compensation is adequate, work ethics are result-oriented. Principles of mastery, autonomy and purpose are valued. Diversity is highly valued, applications from people of various ethnical and gender backgrounds are appreciated!
